End User License Agreement

Creatorz | Effective October 13, 2026

1. License and scope

This End User License Agreement (EULA) applies to the Creatorz mobile or desktop application (App). Creatorz, located in Riverside, California, licenses the App to you; it does not sell the App. Subject to this EULA, Creatorz grants you a personal, limited, nonexclusive, nontransferable, revocable license to install and use the App on devices you own or control for lawful use of the Creatorz service. The Terms of Service also govern your account and content; the Privacy Policy describes data practices.

2. Restrictions and ownership

You may not copy, modify, distribute, rent, sublicense, or sell the App except as law permits. You may not reverse engineer the App except where applicable law expressly allows it, bypass technical protections, or use the App to harm the Service. Creatorz and its licensors retain all rights in the App and related intellectual property.

3. Accounts, content, and third parties

Your use of an account and any creator content is governed by the Terms of Service. The App may rely on internet access, device permissions, and third-party services. Your carrier or provider may charge for data use. Third-party services may have separate terms. You control device permissions through your device settings, though disabling some permissions may limit features.

4. Updates and support

We may provide updates, bug fixes, or new versions. Some updates may be necessary for security or continued use. Creatorz is responsible for App support at team@creatorz.app, subject to any support commitments separately provided. We may discontinue an App version with reasonable notice where practical.

5. App stores

If you downloaded the App from Apple, Google, Microsoft, or another store, that store is not a party to this EULA. The store may be a third-party beneficiary of this EULA to the extent its terms require. Purchases and refunds through a store are also subject to that store's applicable rules. Creatorz, rather than the store, is responsible for addressing claims about the App to the extent required by law.

6. Termination

This license continues until you or Creatorz terminates it. It ends automatically if you materially violate this EULA, subject to applicable law. When it ends, stop using and delete the App from your devices. Account and content consequences are described in the Terms of Service.

7. Warranties, liability, and law

To the extent permitted by law, the App is provided as available, without warranties of uninterrupted operation or fitness for a particular purpose. Nothing limits nonwaivable consumer rights. Liability limits in the Terms of Service apply to App-related claims to the extent legally permitted. California law governs this EULA, excluding conflict-of-law rules, unless mandatory law in your location applies. Courts in Riverside County, California will have jurisdiction except where consumer law gives you another forum.

8. Contact

Questions, complaints, or claims concerning the App may be sent to Creatorz at team@creatorz.app.

Before publication

Confirm which operating systems and app stores distribute the App. If Creatorz has no downloadable App, this EULA is unnecessary.
